the 1990s, the number of people with a university degree has increased in all countries, but the increase has been particularly rapid in the United Kingdom.

There is a growing emphasis on the need for a more 'flexible' labour force, able to respond to changes in demand for skills and to changes in technology. This has led to a growing emphasis on 'lifelong learning' and on the need for workers to be able to update their skills and knowledge throughout their working lives. This has led to a growing emphasis on 'flexible' learning, which is learning that is tailored to the needs of the individual learner and that can be undertaken at any time and in any place.
